Photographers recall, honor gay marriage

Anniversary. This week marks the 10-year anniversary of legal same-sex marriage taking place in Massachusetts.

A decade ago, photographer Marilyn Humphries was documenting what would become one of the most important movements ever for Massachusetts and, eventually, the rest of the country.

"It was huge," said Humphries, speaking of the movement and eventual legalization of same-sex marriage in Massachusetts. "If we had lost I really don't know where we would be now. It would have backed the whole thing up a lot of years."

Now some of Humphries' photos, in addition to pictures from two other photographers, are part of two displays at the Boston Center for Adult Education celebrating the 10-year anniversary of the first legal same-sex marriages in the U.S.

Same-sex couples began marrying in Massachusetts on May 17, 2004, about six months after the state's highest court ruled in favor of it and after failed attempts by some in the state legislature to block it. Since then, more than a dozen states have followed and now allow same-sex marriages.

"It's like the domino effect in some ways," said Humphries. "It's sort of getting over the initial threshold and having gay and lesbian people marry and seeing that there isn't a catastrophic effect from it."

Boston-based photographer Joel Benjamin took portraits of several same-sex couples who have been married for 10 years for the exhibit. The portraits include all seven of the plaintiff couples from the Goodridge court decision that legalized it.

"I think back to when I first came out and, to me, marriage equality was not even imaginable. So now photographing couples who have been married for 10 years is very rewarding," he said.

Susan Symonds, another Boston-based photographer, captured some of the more intense moments of the movement, including the passionate demonstrations.

"I hope that [the exhibit] will say to people be strong, be committed, maintain that vision," she said. "When we were doing this, there was absolutely no hope, no victories yet, so have faith in the big picture, in humanity, that we will make changes that everyone is accepted and there's tolerance for everyone."

The exhibit aims to celebrate and tell the story of the struggle of the movement and the emotion involved in it.

Gay marriage "is now being approved in many different states, but if it weren't for the efforts put forth here who knows what the story would be," said BCAE Executive Director Susie Brown. "The exhibit here ... it clearly illustrates the range of emotions: the hatred felt by some to the jubilation felt by others. It tells a story that should never be forgotten and should continue to be celebrated."

Milestones

Some of the notable events in the years since Massachusetts legalized same-sex marriage:

- Months after Massachusetts' first legal same-sex marriages took place, voters in 11 states backed referendums making it illegal.
- The issue has remained contentious over the past 10 years, with 17 states now offering legal same-sex marriages and 33 states banning it, as of Wednesday.
- In May 2012, President Barack Obama said he supported same-sex marriage, the first time a siting president has expressed support for the issue.
- In June 2013, the Supreme Court struck down the Defense of Marriage Act, which denied federal benefits to married same-sex couples.

New fares, new Green Line cars coming to MBTA

Fare hike. The MassDOT board approved a 5 percent price increase.

The hike is expected to result in a less than 1 percent decline in ridership. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

A state transportation board approved on Wednesday a fare increase to the price of riding the MBTA.

The fare hike, which will take effect in July, was approved during Wednesday's meeting of the MassDOT board, according to the Globe.

The 5 percent fare hike means that subway trips will now cost $2.10, up a dime from current prices. Bus trips will also increase by 10 cents to $1.60, monthly link passes will increase $5 to $75 and commuter rail and ferry single-ride trips will increase between 25 cents and 50 cents each.

With the increase, revenue is expected to go up about 4 percent, by as much as $24 million.

Also on Wednesday, the MassDOT board approved the purchase of 40 new buses and a contract to build 24 new Green Line cars. The new buses will allow the MBTA to retire older buses and are expected to be in service by February.

- The Green Line cars are expected to be delivered between the end of 2017 and the end of 2018.

Drama. Quincy woman threatened Kevin Spacey

A Quincy woman who for years sent threats to actor Kevin Spacey should be sent to jail and should get mental health help, the actor said.

Spacey submitted a victim impact statement in the case of Linda Louise Culkin, according to the Herald.

The written statement was filed in federal court last week, according to the case docket.

"The level of concern, stress, emotional upset and disturbance to my daily life has been the cause of such enormous difficulty to myself and those whom the accused has also threatened and harassed, that it is difficult to measure the degree of terror this situation has caused," Spacey wrote.

Agent: Tsarnaev friend asked if he should get lawyer

Federal court. FBI agents talked about questioning a pair of Tsarnaev's college friends.

An FBI agent investigating the Boston Marathon bombings said one of accused bomber Dzhokhar Tsarnaev's friends asked agents if he needed a lawyer while being questioned, but they told him it was up to him.

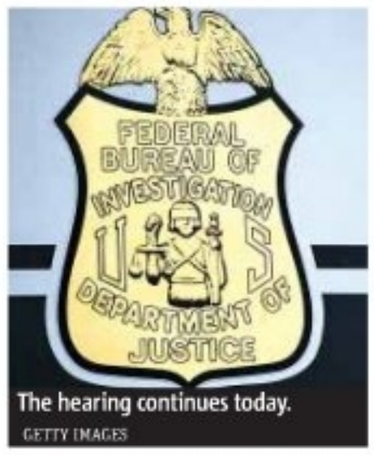
"He asked if [he] needed a lawyer. I explained to him we would not be able to give him any legal advice … and said 'you would have to decide that for yourself,'" FBI Special Agent Farbod Azad said of his interaction with Dias Kadyrbayev.

Kadyrbayev and fellow Kazakh national Azamat Tazhayakov have pleaded not guilty to obstruction of justice and conspiracy charges for allegedly discarding some of Tsarnaev's things from his dorm room following the Marathon bombings.

Additionally, Robel Phillipos, of Cambridge, is charged with lying to authorities. The three knew Tsarnaev while all of them attended UMass Dartmouth in 2011.

Azad was the second FBI agent to take the witness stand on Wednesday during a hearing in which the three friends are seeking to suppress statements made to authorities, claiming they were obtained improperly.

Defense attorneys questioned another FBI agent about why Kadyrbayev and Tazhayakov were kept at a state police barracks until about 4 a.m. after being questioned for hours without a lawyer present.



The hearing continues today.

DA: Charlestown woman assaults police officer

A Charlestown woman was arrested after she allegedly grabbed the arms of police officers fighting with two teens they were trying to arrest.

Consuela Ferguson, 33, pleaded not guilty to assault and battery on a police officer and resisting arrest, according to authorities.

Police chased a 16-year-old Tuesday afternoon after they believed he had a gun. Police said he then ran into a home where his 13-year-old brother also began fighting with officers.

That's when Ferguson, who is related to the teens, grabbed at the officer's arms, police said. METRO

Transgender US soldier. Pentagon considers options for Chelsea Manning

The U.S. military is considering options for the detention of a transgender soldier who is serving time in prison for turning over secret files to WikiLeaks.

The Associated Press on Wednesday reported that defense officials were trying to transfer Chelsea Manning, who seeks to live as a woman, to a civilian prison to facilitate that treatment.

"No decision to transfer Private Manning to a civilian detention facility has been made, and any such decision will, of course, properly balance the soldier's medical needs with our obligation to ensure Private Manning remains behind bars," Rear Admiral John Kirby, a Pentagon spokesman, said in a statement.

Defense officials said that one option under consideration was transferring Manning to a civilian prison.

In April, a U.S. judge ruled that Manning, who had gone by the name Bradley, could legally use the name Chelsea. Manning was born as a man but identifies as a woman.

Manning is serving her sentence in all-male detention facilities at the U.S. Disciplinary Barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

Kirby, in a statement issued to reporters during a visit by Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel to Saudi Arabia, also said that Hagel had approved a request from the U.S. Army to assess "potential treatment options for inmates diagnosed with gender dysphoria," which refers to individuals who experience discontent with their gender.

Manning has repeatedly stated her desire to live as a woman and has requested hormone replacement therapy in prison, but so far Army officials have denied those requests.

Blood clot

Hillary Clinton didn't suffer brain damage: Bill Clinton

Potential Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton did not suffer brain damage from a 2012 blood clot, her husband said on Wednesday.

The New York Post reported on Monday that top Republican strategist Karl Rove suggested last week at a conference that Hillary Clinton suffered a brain injury.

Former President Bill Clinton said this was not the case.

"There is nothing to it," the former president told a conference in Washington.

Hillary Clinton suffered a blood clot in her head in December 2012 after a fall at her home and received several days of treatment at a New York hospital. The incident raised health concerns for Clinton, who was a widely traveled secretary of state for President Barack Obama.

Her husband, who was president from 1993 to 2001, said she was in vigorous health and exercised regularly.

WHO: MERS virus does not constitute a global emergency

Deadly. MERS kills about 30 percent of those infected.

Concern about the deadly new Middle East Respiratory Syndrome virus has "significantly increased," but the disease does not yet constitute a global public health emergency, the World Health Organization (WHO) said on Wednesday.

The virus, which causes coughing, fever and sometimes fatal pneumonia, has been reported in more than 500 patients in Saudi Arabia alone and has spread to neighboring countries and Europe, Asia and the U.S. It kills about 30 percent of those who are infected.

WHO said that based on current information, the seriousness had increased in terms of public health impact, but that there is no evidence of sustained human-to-human transmission. REUTERS

Sick hospital workers test negative

Two hospital workers who fell ill after contact with a patient suffering from MERS have tested negative for the often-deadly virus, a Florida health official said on Wednesday.

Health officials had recently confirmed the country's first two cases of MERS since late April, raising fears about the global spread of the virus responsible for a worsening outbreak in Saudi Arabia. REUTERS

Public exposure

MERS patient sat in ER for hours

The second U.S. patient to be diagnosed with the deadly MERS spent at least four hours in the public waiting room of a busy Florida emergency department before he was seen by a doctor, a hospital official said.

Almost eight more hours passed before staff at Orlando's Dr. P. Phillips Hospital determined the patient had traveled from Saudi Arabia, where he worked at a hospital, began to suspect his exposure to MERS and had him moved to an isolation room, the hospital's chief quality control officer said.

The official, Dr. Antonio Crespo, said that as of Tuesday, he had changed procedures in the emergency department of Dr. P. Phillips Hospital so that any patient who comes in with flu-like symptoms will be asked whether they traveled to Saudi Arabia or other countries experiencing MERS outbreaks.

"That is one of the learning lessons of this experience. Yes, we could have asked this sooner. I think we have created more awareness," Crespo told Reuters in an interview. REUTERS

Nicole Kidman and a much-shorter Tim Roth posed for a photo for their new film, "Grace of Monaco," about Grace Kelly at the 67th Annual Cannes Film Festival on Wednesday. Today in TV news

It's upfront week! The week when networks showcase their fall and midseason shows to attract advertisers, but which also serve as indicators of what shows will be on the air. Here's some of the biggest bits:

Shonda Rimes, the creator of "Grey's Anatomy" and "Scandal," inked an eight-figure deal with ABC for a full night of programming on Thursdays. Starting in the fall, her "Grey's" will move to 8 p.m., while "Scandal" moves to 9 p.m. in order to launch her new drama, "How to Get Away with Murder."

Next fall will see the final season of "Two and a Half Men." After 12 very expensive yet very popular seasons, it will come to a close. The Ashton Kutcher and Jon Cryer comedy's final outing will be a "season-long finale event," Nina Tassler, the president of CBS, said. We're curious if the original "half" man, Angus T. Jones, will return for this "finale event" after leaving the show and calling it "filth."

TBS announced yesterday that their late-night star, Conan O'Brien, has signed on for four more years. We can't wait to not watch him for the next four years. We love you, Conan, but it's still TBS!

Also, Elsa from "Frozen" will be a character on "Once Upon a Time" next season. Sorry, now you have "Let It Go" stuck in your head, don't you?

No Emmy for this 'Television'

Theater. Zeitgeist Stage Company's latest is an uneven but still powerful look at the ethics of reality television.

Like the art form it lampoons, "Good Television" has captivating moments that will raise your ire and make you root beyond all hope for the downtrodden victim at the center of the show. It will also, however, leave you feeling manipulated by plot choices as pedestrian and cliched as those that drive reality TV.

Zeitgeist Stage Company, under the impeccable direction of David Miller, manages to keep things both interesting and entertaining despite the script's shortcomings. But playwright Rod McLachlan's inexperience leads the story to an all-out shouting match, with a big secret ripping the already ravaged family further apart. Both play and playwright are guilty of what they're condemning.

"Rehabilitation" is a reality show that exploits drug addicts and their families with an offer of expensive treatment in exchange for filming their downward spiral and subsequent intervention. With 3 million viewers, the producers decide to capitalize on their ratings gold by doubling the number of episodes without increasing resources.

"Rock star" producer Connie Cuellar (Christine Power) faces her first ethical dilemma when forced to choose someone she deems unsaveable because he's an attractive young man. So begins the convoluted mishmash of ethical issues being scrutinized.

While the satire don't always work, the story itself often does. The manipulation of Clemso (Ben Lewin), the addict, by everyone in his life is far more fascinating than any heavy-handed social commentary McLachlan makes. Equally riveting is the destructive power Clemso's meth addiction has over his sister Brittany (Jenny Reagan).

Reagan and Power deliver such strong performances that you almost forget the problems with "Good Television." That kind of theater is definitely worth watching.

Shell crochet cozies are a must-have

Shell suits are back in fashion ... for tortoises and snails, at least. The made-to-measure, tea cozy-style crochet designs, which snugly fit any shelled frame, are the work of Katie Bradley. The project has fast become a sell-out success with orders coming in from all over the world, and Bradley now offers 25 designs, including shark and stegosaurus outfits on Etsy.com. But if you don't want your critter to be disappointed, order now because there's a six-week waiting list. Bradley says a family joke just became a fashion phenomenon.

Just when you thought it was safe to go back in the water, it actually is. / PROVIDED

Will you be offering seasonal collections?
Absolutely. Quite a few of my designs already are seasonal. I am working on several patriotic Independence Day designs. ... I've also made some more glamorous designs for clients by incorporating sequins and beads.

Are the cozies only for special occasions?
The snails only wear their cozies for photo ops. The rest of the time they're happy to dine nude in my garden.

Why is there such demand?
Tortoise keepers love their tortoises. Often the critter has been in the family for a long time and is considered a part of the family. People like to dress up their dogs, cats, chickens and frogs. ... So dressing up a tortoise isn't such a strange idea. OK, it is a strange idea but is a very cute strange idea.

Pick up a bag, save a turtle

Turtles may or may not be OK with crochet cozies, left, but they're definitely not OK with plastic bags. / COLOURBOX

It's simple. Yes, you can help save an endangered animal.

See that plastic bag blowing down the street? The plastic bag that's blowing down the street toward the river, which, if you don't pick it up, will blow into the water and travel into the ocean. That plastic bag can end up anywhere. Often it ends up in the stomach of a sea turtle, a creature which is found in New England waters. When a turtle swallows a plastic bag it can be fatal.

"When a sea turtle ingests a plastic bag and the bag doesn't pass through their digestive tract, then it becomes stuck or impacted in their intestines," explains Bette Zirkelbach, manager at the Turtle Hospital in Marathon, Florida. "An intestinal blockage can cause an infection; the infection produces gas."

The gas causes buoyancy issues and a problem known as bubble-butt: The turtle's rear floats up, causing breathing, movement and feeding issues. It can be fatal. Lucky turtles are found floating by recreational or commercial boaters and taken to the Turtle Hospital.

"Patients diagnosed with impactions," Zirkelbach begins, referring to turtle patients, "are treated with a broad-spectrum antibiotic for the infection, Beano and lactulose, which moves the impaction through."

She says the turtles recuperate on a diet of fish and squid and vitamin supplements.

"When they're ready, they're returned to the sea," she says.

The Florida Keys is home to five of the world's seven known species of sea turtles. Four species have been spotted in New England, including the green sea turtle. It isn't just plastic waste that harms them. Zirkelbach says many sea turtles in her area have the Fibropapilloma virus, which results in tumors.

"The green sea turtles are herbivores; they feed primarily on sea grass," says Zirkelbach. "There are several theories as to why the green sea turtle is more prone to FP. One is that run-off from the developed land concentrates in the sea grass beds and these pollutants are affecting this particular species' immune system."

Keep the oceans clean

Like humans, given healthy circumstances, sea turtles can live long lives, even reaching 100 years or more.

"Keeping our oceans healthy and clean is key to the survival of sea turtles," adds Zirkelbach. "As with other marine life, trash and pollution is impacting sea turtles negatively. Not only does it affect their health when they ingest it, it's affecting the health of our oceans and their food source."

And a Grumpy birthday to you

Interview. The famed cat "celebrates" two years of tolerating life.

Internet celebrity Grumpy Cat just turned 2, and to celebrate, the adorable fur ball had a "Super Terrible 2" birthday bash hosted by Friskies Party Mix late last month.

Grumpy Cat, whose real name is Tardar Sauce, did not feel like mingling with the crowd of fans sipping Grumptinis and dancing to "Blurred Lines," but she did oblige us with an interview from her VIP (or is it VIC?) lounge. Here's what she had to say about turning 2, via her human translators Brian Bundesen, her uncle, and Ben Lashes, her agent (yes — she has an agent).

What message do you have for other cats now that you're two years old?
My advice is to never start caring.

How do you stay looking so young?
Lots of pampering. My human slaves take good care of me.

What's your favorite flavor of birthday cake?
Burnt.

What have you learned these past two years?
People will be suckers for anything.

How did you spend your birth month?
Spreading grumpiness and sleeping as much as possible. And enjoying Friskies Party Mix.

What's the best birthday present you ever got?
The plane ticket home from New York City.

What was your worst birthday gift or experience ever?
A trip to New York. Everyone showing up to my party with smiles.

What's your birthday wish this year?
For everyone to leave.

Summer tours de force!

They will rock you.
These sounds are about to fill the stadiums.

Bruce Springsteen & the E Street Band

The Boss' recent tour has yielded some crazy covers, ranging from a stumbling rendition of Lorde's "Royals" to a goosebump-inducing version of "Don't Change" by INXS. Maybe the fact that his only announced New England dates are at a casino will mean a cover of Kenny Rogers' "The Gambler." Saturday and Sunday, Mohegan Sun Arena

Jam'n 94.5 Summer Jam

Kendrick Lamar, Lil Jon, Kid Ink, Juicy J, and B.o.B. have been announced so far for this annual throwdown. More names will likely be added as the event draws nearer. Also, the Kiss 108 Concert is the next night. Featuring JLo, Calvin Harris, Aer and more, it's worth hiding in the venue! May 30, Xfinity Center

Billy Joel

The Piano Man takes a break from his Madison Square residency to play in front of the Green Monster, bringing Gavin DeGraw as an opener. June 26, Fenway Park

Zac Brown Band

Sometimes when summer tours are announced, it can take fans by surprise how big their favorite bands are. Didn't Zac Brown last play the venue that's now the Xfinity Center? But now he can command two nights at the ballpark?! Congrats, Zac! You've reached the big time! June 27-28, Fenway Park

Moonshine Jungle

Bruno Mars

Give him your, give him your, give him your attention, baby. The second leg of Bruno Mars' Moonshine Jungle tour is bigger than the first, and he's one of those performers who doesn't back down from a big challenge. Look for high-energy choreography, maybe a B.o.B. cover and possibly even a piano solo. Plus, Pharrell Williams is opening! July 2, TD Garden

Beyonce and Jay Z

After co-headlining tours with Kanye West and Justin Timberlake, Jay Z is finally ready to share the stage with somebody who is indisputably more powerful than he is: his wife. Solange probably won't be accompanying them. July 1, Gillette Stadium

Queen + Adam Lambert

The best way to experience Queen in a live setting is with musicians who actually played in the band — Roger Taylor and Bryan May — fronted by "American Idol" alum Adam Lambert, who tried out for that competition with an a capella version of "Bohemian Rhapsody." July 22, TD Garden

One Direction

Nothing we can write here will change how you feel about 1D: If you like them, you already bought tickets. If you don't, you already stopped reading. Aug. 7-9, Gillette Stadium

Luke Bryan

Who'd have thought 10 years ago that country music would fill stadiums in the Northeast? Well, Kenny Chesney probably would've, but since he's not touring this season, you'll have to settle for Luke Bryan's baseball hat twang this summer. Aug. 10, Gillette Stadium

Arcade Fire

Canada's most accessible art band are keeping sets exciting by covering Boyz II Men and Blondie and having surprise guests under the giant paper mache heads that are part of the "Reflektor" promotion. Aug. 19, Xfinity Center

Artpop Ball

Lady Gaga

"Artpop" was a bit of an art-flop, and the last time we saw Gaga onstage, she had somebody puke on her. But what keeps her from being a mere Marilyn Manson for the Twitter generation is that beyond her shock-value antics are loads of banging dance tunes. June 30, TD Garden

Tech 'n' roll. Come on, everybody, get Together

As Boston's Together Festival enters its fifth year, the traditionally electronic music forum will now incorporate a live psychedelic music contingent largely underexposed until this year.

In collaboration with Together's organizer, David Day, Lily Pad booker Jesse Gallagher (Apollo Sunshine/Nightime Gallagher) has amassed a week of super-stacked sets featuring local and semi-local luminaries such as Sunburned Hand of the Man, Major Stars, Carlisle Sound, Keith Fullerton Whitman, Neptune and a special revival set from the Lilys.

Tonight will end with an assuredly strange set by hometown psych heroes, Major Stars. Somewhat sponsored by Google Glass, the band members will wear the newest and priciest headgear and provide the audience with a unique experience yet to be determined.

"Google Glass was not part of the initial proposal," says Wayne Rogers, a founder of Major Stars. "I didn't really know what it was. I Googled it to find out. [I have] slight trepidation and mild annoyance [about it]. … maybe they'll just fall off."

On Sunday, Keith Fullerton Whitman will open another all-star bill with Neptune and Sunburned Hand of the Man.

"I'll be playing a set on a small digital-analogue hybrid modular synthesizer — that's what I've been doing the most over the past few years," says Whitman, who is pictured doing just that on the cover of today's Metro. "It's fairly 'free' in rhythmic and tonal senses, but occasionally coalesces into something sub-dividable and/or melodic." NOLAN GAWRON

Quoted

"The music of the future is not going to resemble the music of the past and nor should it and nor did it ever. … It's part of the reason I love music so much." David Day

Climate should not be about politics

Actually, global temperatures are both natural from plants and biosphere, man-made, and, yes, even animal-made. Aloof Republicans joke that cow farts contribute methane to the atmosphere. But none of this matters. It comes to one basic principle as mentioned in the Constitution's Preamble: the welfare of the people. That's why the government needs to act now. What does government do when confronted with nature's God allowing the human species to go extinct? The common good requires an environment. Even President Nixon knew that when he motivated Congress to adopt the EPA and the Clean Air and Clean Water acts. But today, America considers pollution and environmental causes along party lines. People need to take sides, because Congress is obstinate in fulfilling its obligations to the national good — unless people don't mind living in a cesspool.
ARTHUR BLENHEIM, VIA EMAIL

Less debate about climate, more about education

Maybe Metro should spend less time incessantly publishing opposing views on climate change and post letters on other problems affecting the U.S., such as an educational system that is not even in the Top 20 in the world and the fact that the economy is creating so few jobs and that birth rates of the lower-income people are so high that about 46 million people are on food stamps.

Habs knock out Bruins with Game 7 haymaker

NHL. The Canadiens beat the Bruins, 3-1, in Game 7 on Wednesday to take the brutal semifinal series.

The Bruins had the best regular-season record in the NHL in 2013-14 and hopes for another deep Stanley Cup playoff run were sky high. But even through all that success, from Oct. 3, 2013 through the start of this week, there was a great deal of doubt from most onlookers regarding the B's ability to match up against the Canadiens. Montreal, which took three of four in the regular season against the Bruins, ended the Bruins season Wednesday at TD Garden with a 3-1 Game 7 victory. Montreal now advances to the Eastern Conference finals to face the New York Rangers.

An early Montreal goal and some costly penalties immediately took the home crowd out of it. Daniel Briere caught the Bruins' defense sleepwalking as he slid a pass to Dale Weise right in front of the net. Tuukka Rask didn't have a chance on Weise's offering and the Habs had a 1-0 lead just 2:18 in.

Boston wasn't getting the calls early on either as Brad Marchand was hit with an interference call. Reilly Smith was soon-after upended in front of Carey Price's net, but there was no interference call.

Just seven seconds into the second period, Marchand was called for an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty for spraying Price with ice kick-up from his skates after he stopped short in front of the net. It set up yet another early Montreal power play.

Pistons hire Van Gundy

Stan Van Gundy chose Detroit real estate over the Bay Area, signing to become head coach and president of the Pistons on Wednesday. The former Magic and Heat head coach had been pursued by the Warriors as well. But he'll have say over personnel decisions in Detroit, which fired GM Joe Dumars after the season.

MLB. Ortiz broke up Darvish no-hit bid twice, according to MLB ruling

It's unlikely MLB would have followed through with this decision had Rangers pitcher Yu Darvish gotten David Ortiz out in the ninth inning last week to earn a no-hitter, but MLB ruled Wednesday a ball hit by Ortiz in the seventh inning last Friday was actually a hit and not an error by Texas fielders.

Darvish seemingly had a no-hitter intact in the ninth inning with two outs Friday but Ortiz singled, so in the record books Ortiz will be credited with two hits on the night. METRO

Garoppolo was issued jersey No. 10, the number he wore at Eastern Illinois. METRO

NFL. Former NY Giants safety shot by Taser after 'drunken scooter chase'

Former New York Giants defensive back Tyler Sash was shot with a Taser and arrested last weekend in Iowa after leading police on a "drunken scooter chase."

According to reports, Sash was riding a motorized scooter at 1:30 a.m. with its lights off and would not pull over when officers urged him to stop.

Sash eventually fled by foot and hid behind a tree before being arrested.

Sash played in 23 career games with the Giants. METRO
